Destructive Halloween.

This city was placed in a seriously dangerous condition on the night of Halloween, when the pole containing the wires of the electric fire alarm system was pulled down, breaking the lines. In case of fire no communication could have been had with the pump house and there is no telling what might have happened in case that there had been a serious fire.

The lawless element that would conceive of such an act is one that cannot be appealed to through the news papers. Our caution published in our last issue evidently did not reach the parties who did this act for if it had they would have realized the foolishness of any act that would destroy property, and especially one like this, that was in itself criminal.

At about 1:45 a. m. the fire bell was sounded. Whether the same parties had a hand in both acts or not, has not yet been determined.

Halloween nor any other occasion gives one a license to destroy property. Some people will say that, "Oh well we have done the same thing." This is not true; and even if it were, it is no excuse. Common sense and decency should teach us better.

A wagon box was placed in the middle of the street, and any vehicle might have been seriously damaged and physical injury brought to its occupants. Dozens of other depredations were committed that were sufficient to land the perpetrators in jail; and the citizens are justly up in arms and it is no doubt but what if caught the guilty parties will have to pay a penalty for their acts.

No doubt a reward will be offered for arrest and conviction of the person or persons who are responsible for the damage done to the fire alarm system on Halloween night.

Mrs. Moshier Laid to Rest.

There was a very large attendance at the funeral services of Mrs. Philip Moshier at the M. E. church Friday afternoon. The Scriptures read by the pastor Rev. V. J. Hufon were the twelfth chapter of Ecclesiastics and seventh chapter of Romans, the sermon being based on two texts—one from each chapter.

The sudden passing of Sister Moshier reminded us of the words, "the pitcher broken at the fountain" whilst her manner of life was not to boast of piety, even as Paul when he declared "what I would, that I do not but what I hate that do I." Mrs. Moshier came from a beautiful land to this community when sparsely populated but she has certainly now passed to "that better land."

A good mother and housekeeper, quiet and sincere in her religious profession, she had long been a faithful sustainer of public worship of God. The edifice and interior furniture would recall Mrs. Moshier's labors in years to come, to those who had been associated with her.

In doing churchmanship she had assisted in carrying out the prayer of Jesus when He prayed that his disciples should not be removed from the earth after conversion but rather that they be kept from evil. When such a supporter passed away it was necessary to close up the ranks that the great undertaking of the church in leaving humanity should not suffer.

Mrs. Moshier's favorite hymn, "Sweet Peace" was sung by the choir and Beethoven's Andante was rendered by Mrs. Hufon as the friends took their last look at the remains as they laid in the beautiful casket before the church.

There were many beautiful floral pieces. After the service the funeral cortege followed the remains to their final resting place in Elmwood cemetery.

You should make sure, by a thorough examination, at the hands of a competent optometrist, that your child is not among this vast army of little citizens who suffer from defective eyesight. Delay often result seriously.

We make these examinations by the most scientific, accurate methods. If your child does not need glasses we will tell you so frankly.

MILLIONAIRE PACKER IS DEAD

PENALTY OF BUSINESS STRESS PAID BY EDWARD MORRIS AT HIS CHICAGO HOME.

SUFFERED NERVOUS BREAK-DOWN ONE YEAR AGO.

Brother Called From Italy Only Reached Bedside Just As the Sick Man's Life Ended.

Chicago—Edward Morris, president of Morris & Co., and one of the wealthiest packers in the world, died at his home on Drexel boulevard early Monday.

EDWARD MORRIS.

Mr. Morris had been ill for several months. Although his condition was admitted to be critical at times, it was denied at his home that there was any real cause for worry. He died at dawn, but news of his death was not given out by relatives until several hours later.

Word was sent to the Blackstone hotel to Ira Nelson Morris, brother and business partner of the dead packer, that death was expected at any time. He arrived at the Morris mansion a few minutes before his brother passed away. He had been called from Italy because of his brother's condition.

Until an hour before his death, Mr.
Morris was conscious. All the members of his family were at the bedside
when the end came.

Mr. Morris was born in Chicago 47 years ago and was the oldest son of the late Nelson Morris, pioneer packer. After suffering a nervous breakdown about a year ago he was obliged to give up active business. He spent last winter traveling in California in search of health, but when he returned last spring his friends noted that he had not been benefited
by the trip.

Just after celebrating his seventy-ninth birthday Alfred Skipper, a Schoolcraft farmer, fell in his barn and was so severely injured he cannot live.

At the annual convention of the third district W. C. T. U. at Mason, Maude Holmes, of Eaton Rapids, was elected president. Grand Lodge was chosen as the place for the next convention.

Postmaster H. T. McGrath has received an order discontinuing the Chester postoffice after November 1.
After that date the Chester patrons will receive their mail on rural No. 7
out of Charlotte.

Arrangements were made at a meeting of more than 300 Pere Marquette strikers in Saginaw to continue the strike against the railroad and for the purchase of fuel for the use of strikers during the winter. A vote was taken as to whether the strike
should continue, and more than 99
per cent voted to stay out.

Two attempts were made by parents to take their children by kidnapping or force from the Grand Rapids juvenile home, one attempt proving successful. While Matron Regester was absent James Hurley visited the home and, after knocking Miss Jennie Neubaum, an assistant, to the floor, took his two sons, 13 and 11, and escaped.
Because she feared her son was to be detained at the juvenile home indefinitely, Mrs. Tich Jennings made an attempt to kidnap her 12-year-old son,
but the effort proved unavailing.

The University of Michigan entertained distinguished guests from Ohio Monday. They were Gov. Cox and other state officials; President Thompson, of Ohio university; trustees of the university; and Walter Sears,
chairman of Ohio regents.

The corner stone of Owosso's new Carnegie library was laid Tuesday afternoon, with the Grand Lodge of Michigan, F. & A. M., in charge of the ceremonies. All Masonic lodges in the county had been invited to participate. Dr. J. O. Parker acted as marshal of the day.

Deputy Fire Marshal Marquard has ordered three moving picture houses closed until the buildings have been remodeled to conform with the law.
One is in Paw Paw, another in Lawrence and the third in Hartford.

The Pere Marquette will build a new depot opposite the former site of Court street, in Port Huron. This decision was reached at a conference between Railroad Commissioner Cunningham, Supr. Hayes, of the Pere Marquette, and local citizens. The new structure must be finished by Jan. 15.

AUTO CRASH KILLS THREE

Motor Party at Bay City Ends in Tragedy When Machine Runs
Into Row of Trees.

Bay City, Mich.—Alex. Turpin, night
clerk at the Forest City house, died at the West Side hospital Saturday morning from injuries received a few hours earlier in a motor car accident in which Marvin Luke and George Jones of Detroit were instantly killed.
Olive Lee, Kate Paplinski and Mary Williams, dining room girls, were all badly bruised, and Miss Lee sustained a broken arm. J. Greeley, driver of the machine, and C. F.
Dittman, also of Detroit, escaped without injury.

Greeley invited the party for a ride, promising to bring them back in an hour. They were driving in Marquette avenue when the machine left the pavement and ran into a row of trees
"sideswiping" two or three of them before it stopped, a mass of wreckage
with the victims caught beneath it.
Luke was crushed under the steering apparatus and Jones had a fractured skull.

The Detroit men were employed by the Vinton Co. and had been engaged in decorating Trinity Episcopal church here for several weeks.

Receipts Show Little Decrease.

Washington.—Although the new tariff act with its lowered rates of duty has been in effect practically a month, the customs receipts have so far shown little falling off. According to the treasury statement November 1, the customs receipts for October amounted to $30,138,000, just about $80,000 less than those of October, 1914. The deficit for the fiscal year to date, the statement shows, is $5,757,627, about $3,900,000 more than the deficit at the corresponding period
last year.

Pension payments under the Sherwood act are apparently largely responsible for the larger deficit.

The payments in 1912 through October amounted to about $52,500,000
and for the same period this year nearly $57,000,000, an increase of more than $4,000,000 in this one disbursement item.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

The sum of $15,000 was voted by the Wexford county supervisors for the building of state reward roads in 1914.
Hal Warner, 21 years old, of Elm-muzzo, is dead as the result of being hurt in a football game. The boy's heart was injured by a fall, say physicians.

At the bankruptcy hearing in the case of the defunct Fox & Mason Furniture Co., of Corunna, it was decided to sell the plant to the highest bidder,
Nov. 19.

The three-year-old daughter of Mr.
and Mrs. Fred Stevens, of Rochester, was burned to death in an upper room of the family home. The child was playing alone and it is believed she got hold of matches and set her clothing afire.

The law making it a misdemeanor to have dogs in the woods during the deer-hunting season will be rigidly enforced from now on, according to William R. Oates, state game warden.
Dogs found running at large will be shot on sight.

Carl Pearsall, 13 years old, son of a farmer east of Benton Harbor, while hunting with other boys, fell from a stump on which he was standing and in the fall discharged the gun, the full charge entering his breast. He died a few minutes later.

Thomas Roberts, one of the four survivors of the 15 men who were in the cage that dropped from the top of the Jones & Laughlin mine shaft to the bottom in 1907, a distance of 662 feet, died at Iron River. Roberts never walked after the accident on account of injuries sustained.

Precautions for the stilling and care of cows during the winter have been summed up on printed instructions and are being distributed to the farmers of the state by State Dairy and Food Commissioner Helme. The instructions make clear the importance of clean stalls in relation to pure milk.

The Michigan Central railroad has announced that it intends to construct new car shops and build a new freight depot at Bay City and that ground will be broken in a few weeks. The work will cost more than $500,000. The road has just spent about three-quarters of a million for new round houses and yards at this point.

President W. S. Linton, Saginaw
board of trade, has appointed a committee of 15 to promote a campaign for pure water. The common council committee has started a movement to obtain a filtration plant, and both business and municipal bodies promise to unite so the Saginaw public shall not depend on corner pumps for drinking water.

Helen Nuerminger, 17 months old,
of Saginaw, playing while her mother was doing the family washing Monday, upset a boiler of hot water on herself and died Tuesday from her burns.

The sum of $15,000 was voted by the Wexford county supervisors for the building of state reward roads in Wexford county in 1914. The Wexford County Good Roads association will pay $7,000 toward good roads in the county. It is estimated that eight miles of reward road can be constructed in Wexford in 1914.

At an auction sale the old city
market site at Flint was sold for $15, 000 or thereabouts. There are no buildings on the ground. Charles Burch, of Detroit, purchased the large-est portion of the site.

The common council of Saginaw will have to go ahead and make necessary preparations for a special election to be held November 15 on the proposed new charter for the city, as the supreme court granted the writ of mandamus asked against the council, asked on behalf of the charter commissioners.

ZUYDER ZEE TO BE DRAINED BY DUTCH GOVERNMENT

Queen Wilhelmina has told the Dutch parliament that a bill is to be introduced for the drainage of the Zuyder Zee so as to form a new province. This body of water was formerly a lake surrounded by marshes, its present extent of some 2,000 square miles being chiefly the result of floods in the thirteenth century. It is from ten to nineteen feet deep.

in Hollywood cemetery, in Richmond, Va.

paralytic shock in Washington, on February 23, 1848. His remains were conveyed to Quincy, Mass., and buried in the room under the Unitarian church.

Andrew Jackson died on June 8, 1845, at the Hermitage, his country seat, situated 12 miles east from Nashville, Tenn., in a corner of the flower garden, about 80 yards from the historic dwelling, under a massive canopy of Tennessee limestone rests the brave general with his beloved wife, who had gone before.

at Kinderhook, N. Y., when seventy-nine years of age and was buried in a cemetery near that town.

William Henry Harrison died April 24, 1841, just one month after his inauguration as president, at Washington, and was first interred in the old Congressional cemetery, in the capital city. A few years later his body was removed to North Bend, O., where it now rests.

John Tyler died July 8, 1862, at Richmond, Va., and was laid to rest in beautiful Hollywood cemetery.

June 16, 1849, at Nashville, Tenn. He and remains of his wife were buried in the northeast corner of the capitol grounds.

Zachary Taylor, after serving only 16 months as chief executive of the nation, was taken away on July 9, 1850, at Washington, and his mortal remains now rest in the little cemetery at Frankfort, Ky.

Millard Fillmore passed away on

Denver Judge Throws Down

Denver, Colo.—By way of an elaborately prepared pamphlet entitled untlet to the Woman's Protective league.

Denver, O.—Ohio's oldest goose,

When Wesley Gouldin and his family left Marion county for the Pacific coast, driving oxen, they took with them the best specimens of their barnyard fowls. The only bird which survived their journey was a white goose.
So attached did the family become to it that it was always regarded as a household pet.

For 50 years the goose laid from three to ten eggs every spring. Of late years the supply dwindled until this spring only one small egg was produced. When the gaunt fowl of the aged bird failed longer to bear up its body the bird died.

Wounded Knee.

Valentine, Neb.—A part of the his-

was fought December 28, 1890, was reproduced for motion pictures near the Pine Ridge agency at the instigation of Col. W. F. Cody.

The assistance of some of the same
Indians who participated in the bat-

same part that they took in the bat-

MEXICAN DICTATOR MUST RESIGN

HUERTA ORDERED TO RETIRE
WITHOUT LOSS OF TIME; CAN-NOT LEAVE ADHERENT AS SUCCESSOR.

AMERICAN ULTIMATUM IS EAGERLY AWAITED BY OFFICIAL.

Only Two Answers Are Believed Open
to Huerta—First, Refusal to Comply With the Demand; Second
His Retirement As Demanded.

Mexico City.—President Huerta has been told he must resign the presidency of Mexico without loss of time and that he must not leave as his successor General Aureliano Blanquet, his minister of war, or any other member of his official family, or of the unofficial coterie whom he might be expected to control.

This ultimatum from Washington
was conveyed to President Huerta
through his private secretary, Senor Rabago, by Nelson O'Shaughnessy,
the American charge d'affaires, acting under instructions from the state department.

Senor Rabago presented the memorandum to his chief but up to Monday evening President Huerta had returned no answer and, as far as could be learned, had guarded its contents from almost all of his official and intimate counselors.

Those who learned of the Washington note regard General Huerta's position as one in which he will be forced to give one of two answers—refusal point blank to comply with the demand, possibly going so far as to hand the diplomatic representative his passports, or the elimination of himself officially.

are establishing stores at Calumet, Laurium, Alouez and Painesdale, where goods will be sold strikers at cost. They claim they can support 5,000 strikers and families through the winter.

Fearing they will be discriminated headed by Finnish business men of the panies for re-employment. They have nated against if they renounce the

HOME DEPARTMENT OF THE AVALANCHE

FEATURES OF INTEREST AND VALUE TO THE WOMEN IN THE HOMES OF GRAYLING AND CRAWFORD COUNTY.

Corsage Rose Sets Off the Costume.

WITH soft lace drapery which forms their bodices, gowns for evening or for afternoon functions are completed by draped skirts meeting the bodices with a girle or sash. Often the top of the skirt extends itself into the waist line drapery, and often a separate girle in a contrasting color is employed.

But whatever the finish at the waist line, for these gowns for high occasions, the splendid corsage rose is rarely left out. This is a rose made of ribbon or velvet, mounted with or without millinery foliage and having a ribbon-wrapped stem.

Such a rose is posed at the front of the gown, usually a little toward the left side and just under the bust. It is a splendid factor in the costume; it is in fact "featured," given the star part in the composition of the picture.

The roses of satin or velvet are made in all the fashionable new colors. Certain yellow and strong light green shades, also deep orange and black, have been favorites. These corsage roses—in passing—will transform a plain skirt and dressy blouse into quite formal dress. They are large and are made of ribbon about three inches wide, or wider. The ribbon is cut into lengths to form the petals, each length being twice that of required petal plus an inch extra for plaiting in at the base of the petal and winding in at the stem.

A wire provides the stem. A little ball of cotton is wound about one end, the size of a thimble, and over this a bit of ribbon is placed and fastened to the stem by winding it with a thread or tie-wire. About this center a short length of ribbon (folded lengthwise) is wrapped to imitate the small petals, still unopened, at the heart of the rose.

After the center has been made in this way, the petals are made. Each short length is doubled and plaited in at the raw edges. The plait is sewed down. After the petals—say ten or eleven in all—have been made, they are fastened about the center of the rose already formed, tied to the stem with thread or tie-wire. Finally the corners are curled back on some of the petals and blind-stitched down. Shape the petals, cupping them with the fingers. Wind the stem with narrow green ribbon, winding in a spray or two of millinery rose foliage.

These roses made of velvet ribbon about two inches wide in a deep gold color are mounted with velvet foliage. Besides satin and velvet ribbon the heavier gauze ribbons are used, and the gold and silver tissue. Roses of this sort are expensive bits of luxury when bought ready-made—from about two to five dollars each. The value is placed upon the time consumed in making them, and the workmanship, far more than in the material used.

For less dress-up times, the little rosette of rosebuds made of several different colors of narrow satin ribbon, is still a great favorite. These small roses are made of a length of satin ribbon (folded lengthwise along the center) or of separate petals made of narrow ribbon. They are mounted on little stems of small green covered wire. Sprays of fine millinery foliage of maidenhair fern usually are used with them by way of variety. Narrow velvet ribbon in green or purple winds the stems together, and finish the nosegay with a little bow. These small nosegays are scented, and form the daintiest of accessories worn on the coat or furs for the street. Small bits of ribbon or silk will make them. They are always appreciated, bound to please those who possess a sense of the value of such finishing touches to the toilet. It would be difficult to think up a better Christmas gift for one's friends. JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

AFTERNOON GOWN
A TRIUMPH OF
FRENCH DESIGN

HERE is an unusual and attractive gown from the salon of a notable French designer. It has the grace of simplicity and it embodies several of the best style features of the present season. Among these there are the loose and comfortable management of the sleeve, the tunic, the girle, the easy adjustment of the bodice and a skirt a little shorter at the front than at the back and hanging in about the feet.

There is a little under bodice of embroidered chiffon with elbow sleeves, finished with a wired ruffling of matisse. A band of beaded embroidery adorns the material of the bodice, which is draped in the fashion of the Chinese collar.

It is not always easy to solve the intricacies in construction of the most pleasing looking of French gowns. It is quite likely that this one is made in two pieces, with the skirt and bodice attached to a short under waist. The skirt overlaps at the front. The girle is boned and is of soft satin, lined in irregular pleats. Girles are, almost without exception made in colors contrasting with the used in the body of the gown. Some times a girle is in several colors those in plaid of bright tones being favored for paila cloth gowns. An older development of the always present girle shows silk in three colors laid in pleats, making a three-toned girle. Certain it is that, in the management of the waist line, our present modes are the most artistic, the most easy and graceful of any that lie with in the memory of the women of our country.

The study of a gown of as great artistic value as this one should involve that of the dressing of the feet and the arrangement of the coiffure, because both these matters should enter into the consideration of a dressy costume at any time. Satin slippers in black with rhinestone buckles, and silk hosiery of the color of the gown take care of the clothing of the feet appropriately.

The coiffure is one of those designs classified as the "casque" style, in which all the hair is waved. It is arranged over the head like a turban. There is no chignon at the back. The ends of the hair are turned under the waves and spread about in such a way as to dispense with a coil.

In cutting a gown of this character wide goods are more easily managed than narrow. Skirts, overlapping at the front, while narrow, give room for easy walking because the front seam is not joined down to the bottom. The under petticoat must be soft; the most clinging of fabrics, as chiffon or crepe de chine, or lace. An inserted flounce will take the place of a petticoat. Anything heavy enough to interfere with the falling of the skirt in close and clinging lines would destroy an important item in the beauty of the design. It is the hang and not fit of garments which is of paramount importance now. The figure, without distortion of any sort, without restraint but in the lovely, natural silhouette is glorified in present day styles, which really amount to cleverly arranged drapery. Garments must not shape the figure today; they must be shaped by it, or appear to be, anyway. Hence so many gowns seem to be designed for the cornetless figure.

A DAY WITH LEFTOVERS.

To use mutton the day after—chop a small onion and fry in a tablespoonful of butter or other fat, then add a tablespoonful of flour and let it brown. Mix a tablespoonful of Worcester sauce, a tablespoonful of vinegar, pepper and salt and a tablespoonful of red currant jelly with a cup of water. Cook all together, and when hot add thin slices of cold cooked mutton, and simmer for fifteen minutes or until the meat is well heated through.

Mutton De Bouc—This is a French method of using left-over boiled or stewed beef: Cut in slices four or five and cook them in butter or fat, add a tablespoonful of flour to form a roux, or sauce, and thin this with some of the broth of the meat, or bouillon, adding pepper and salt. In this sauce, which should be extremely thick, put in the meat cut in thin slices. Let it cook on a slow fire for an hour, stirring it from time to time. If the sauce becomes too thick, add broth or water. A little tomato sauce added at the last is relished by many.

Fish and Egg Pie—Flake a pound of cold cooked white fish, cover with chopped parsley (a tablespoonful), add a tablespoonful of anchovy essence, two tablespoonfuls of butter and a half cup of cream or milk. Cover with a pastry made with two cups of flour, a teaspoon of baking powder and a half teaspoon of salt, with a half cup of rich cream. Bake until the crust is well done, remove from the oven, lift the cover and pour in three well beaten eggs. Replace the crust, put in the oven for a minute or two. Serve very hot.

A good pudding sauce which will be ready to use may be made from a little of the juice poured off from juicy apples when they are stewing. When wanted, add a little lemon juice and reheat.

A delicious sauce to serve with warmed-over meats is this: Chop one dozen olives fine. Brown a tablespoonful of butter, add a tablespoonful of flour and brown again. Stir in a cup of stock; continue to stir until smooth. Season with salt, pepper and Worcestershire sauce, then add the chopped olives, and cook slowly for five minutes.

Melted ice cream should not be thrown away; it may be used in cake or cookies, leaving out the milk called for in the recipes.

There is a shady side of life, And a sunny side as well, And 'tis for every one to say, On which side he'd choose to dwell; For every one unto himself Commits a grievous sin; Who bars the blessed sunshine out And shuts the shadows in. —Josephine Pollard.

THANKSGIVING TABLE.

Frozen cranberries make a delicious change from the ordinary way of serving berries at this season. Pick over and wash quart of berries. Dissolve two cupfuls of sugar in two cupfuls of water and heat slowly until boiling hot, then add the cranberries and cook until soft; cool and add one-half cup of lemon juice. Rub through a sieve, turn into a melon mold and bury in ice and salt for four hours.

Dainty little individual pumpkin pies, baked in patty tins, are great favorites with the children and even grown-ups seem to tolerate them fairly well. Serve with a spoonful of whipped cream sprinkled with grated cheese, for the older people.

Candies, with pumpkin yellow shades for each corner of the table, go well with this centerpiece. Thanksgiving Pudding—To two cups of chopped suet add two cupfuls of fine bread crumbs, softened with one cup of grape juice; add three well beaten eggs, one-half cup each of brown sugar and molasses, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg to taste. Mix well and add one cup of raisins, chopped. One-half cup of dried currants, one-fourth cup of candied orange peel and a half cup of nutmegs, all well dredged with flour. Sift two teaspoonfuls of baking powder with a half cup of flour and add, beating well. Put into well buttered molds or a mold and steam three hours. When ready to serve garnish the pudding with nut meats.

Sweet potatoes cooked until tender.

der, then buttered and sprinkled with sugar, set into the oven to brown, make a pleasant change from the every day way of serving them.

Money, because of the material things it can buy, the political influence and the social prestige that its possession facilitates, becomes an efficient minister to selfishness, and therefore, a great enemy of friendliness. The remedy is, to begin to use it as soon as one has even a little bit of it, in friendly ways. —Edward Bosworth.

THINGS WE LIKE TO KNOW.

To keep comforters and blankets clean, have a strip of white cloth about twelve inches wide to face the ends of the bedding used next to the face.

Ice can be made to last almost twice as long by wrapping well in newspapers. When a crack appears in a stove it may often prove a great menace to life, especially if it is a coal heater. Mix wood ashes with common salt made into a paste with a little water, and plaster over the crack. It may be put on to a cold or a hot stove equally well.

Health Bran Bread—Take two cups of graham flour, two cups of bran, two cups of white flour, one teaspoonful of salt, one egg, one pint of milk, or buttermilk, one cup of New Orleans molasses, one cup of raisins, two teaspoonfuls of soda and a half cup of boiling water. Mix well and steam three hours. Bake a half hour or more in the oven to dry off. Put into one pound baking powder cans and remove the covers when put into bake.

When one has part of a bottle of olives, pour a tablespoonful of olive oil over the liquid in the bottle and they will keep indefinitely without becoming tasteless.

A magazine heated in the oven will make a first rate foot warmer, or take the place of a hot water bag without any fear of a leak.

When putting pockets on aprons, place a small piece of the goods at each corner and stitch down twice, then nothing short of a wrench will tear it down.

Those who use radiators will find that after food has come to a good boil on the stove it may be placed on the radiator, and if well covered, will continue cooking. This is especially good for long, slow cooking.

Open the gas oven for the steam to escape before heating it for baking. The moisture runs down into the hinges of the door otherwise, and will in time rust them.

One mother who has several children away from home writes with impression paper, thus making as many copies as she needs. Each gets his letter, with any personal additions, with the work of but one.

SOME GOOD THINGS.

Go on with your work and be strong Halting not in your ways, Balking, the end will won. For an instant dote of praise, Stand to your work and be wise, Certain of sword and pen, You are neither children nor gods, But men in a world of men. —Rudyard Kipling.

Stir up with a spoon a soft biscuit dough and fill greased muffin pans half full. Make a hollow in the center and fill with a little Marmalade or jam. Bake in a quick oven and serve with cream or a liquid sauce, flavored with lemon juice or vinegar. This is a good emergency dessert to keep in mind when there seems nothing to have for dinner.

Chili Con Carne—Boil until tender two cups of the little brown beans. Grind a pound of round steak, put into a saucepan to cook with cold water to cover; add a tablespoonful of butter, as much red pepper as you can endure, and cook an hour and a half. When the beans are tender, add them and cook an hour longer.

Spaghetti—Fry a clove of garlic in a tablespoonful of olive oil or butter, add two tomatoes, sliced; cook until the tomatoes are smooth and cooked to a pulp. Prepare the spaghetti by boiling in salted water until tender. Drain and add to the tomatoes, well seasoned with salt and red pepper. Garlic is one of our most wholesome flavor vegetables, but is in disrepute because of the unwholesome manner in which it is used by some. There should be just a suggestion of the flavor, illusive and indefinable, to make a perfectly flavored dish. Garlic is said to help digestion, and preserves one from epidemics and pestilential diseases.

Religion the Supreme
Thing in Life

By REV. J. H. RALSTON
Secretary of Correspondence Department
Meady Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness. Matt. 6:33.

For the thorough Bible student the text must be interpreted in certain ideas suggested by the term "kingdom of God." But this text can be taken by itself as suggestive of thought, which, while not confined to the general subject under consideration, is most practical and timely.

The apostle James does not give a definition of religion when he says "pure religion, and undefiled before God and the father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." Two elements of religion only here appear, that which is broadly called charity, which with many is nothing more than altruism, and separation from the world, which has been designated recently as aloofness. In religion there is something that is positive, it must go beyond kind deeds to the needy, and retirement from the world. A great theologian defines religion as the sum of the relations which man sustains to God, and comprises the truths, the experiences, the actions and institutions which correspond to, or grow out of those relations.

As thus defined religion must be the supreme thing in life. This life may be of the community, for no community realizes the acme of social happiness unless it is in a corporate way respectful to the elements of religion just presented; but we desire to place the emphasis on the individual life. We would not do this because we ignore community life, but because reaching the individual lives that make the community we reach the community in a way that is infinitely more satisfactory than by reaching it in its corporate capacity. We would not confuse any individual by calling his attention to religion as supreme in the community, but as supreme in himself.

The first reason for this is that God commands it as in the text announced, as creator, preserver, daily benefactor and guarantor of blessings on man, the value of which cannot be measured. This right of God to command is denied by many, and not even a word of thanksgiving for the daily blessings of life, nor a prayer for their continuance is heard, except from very few.

The universal belief in the immortality of the soul of man puts emphasis on the value of the permanent. Religion directly affects the permanent. It emphasizes that which is beyond this life, yet one of the strange things of human experience is that multitudes come to the end of life as if there was nothing beyond. The old prophet's "prepare to meet thy God" is not a mere matter of historical interest, it should ring in the ears of every living man and woman. After death there is judgment appointed of God, and the Judge has likewise been appointed. But what are the issues of judgment? In short, heaven and hell. Yet how cynically these great facts are thought of and spoken about, but religion provides for the winning of the one, and escaping the other. If heaven and hell are myths, there must be a revision not only of the teachings of Jesus Christ and his apostles, but of the moral philosophy of all the ages. If these great facts of the beyond were a more permanent element in the evangel of the day, that evangel would be far more effective.

Another reason why religion should be supreme is that the worry of men and women over the things of small importance would disappear. In close connection with this text Jesus spoke of the anxious care for food and clothing. "That is what is eating out the life of multitudes today, something entirely unnecessary. If religion is made supreme, food, clothing, housing and the like, will be added by God. God sees to it that those who obey his command, and recognize the purpose of their being are provided for, for as Father he knows that men have need of all these things, and yet supplying them he never puts a premium on laziness or unthrift.

The word first as used here may be taken first as referring to interest or concern. At this point even a little thought as to what religion can do for man would increase this concern. But the word may mean first in time, and the text might be paraphrased in this way, become religious by taking the initial step of believing in Jesus Christ, and do it without a moment's delay.

MOUNTAIN OF FUJI

Description of Visit to Holy Mount of Japan.

"White Ghost of Fuji" Half Velled in Mist an Interesting Sight on Japan Coast—Story of Ascent and Features of Trip.

Tokyo, Japan.—I and my Buddhist priest brother were settled in the train with our minds happily dwelling on the wisdom of nature which grows green foliage in summer, and our hearts leapt up when we first beheld Fuji mountain, or, more true to say, the white ghost of Fuji, as a certain poetess wrote. She is, indeed, a ghost half-velled in dream-mist, always haunting us, now from the left or right, then from behind or before, during the run of 70 or 80 miles along the Pacific coast, where she mirrors her own beautiful face patiently and breathlessly all the day on the waves of the sea. Why were our minds so much taken with Fuji mountain? Because we were this day, July 20, on the very way to climb the holy mountain of Japan.

As our serpentine train crossed the desolate Banryu river and we entered the mountains and valleys of the Hakone range, our immediate thought was that we had happened by accident or dream within the domain of some Scottish mountain elf. We left the train at Gotemba to take a horse car toward Subashiri, one of the three places (it is generally called the Eastern Gate, and is the easiest route) where the holy climb may properly begin. We left the place on horseback, accompanied by a mountain guide, or goriki, who carried on his back plenty of food and water and some blankets and clothing. We wore large bamboo mushroom hats, on which the words, "We two shadowy pilgrims of the holy highway" were written; and our shoulders bore, according to the fashion, wide straw rain-coats. We sang a song that was not of a city's rise or fall, but of a wind or flower, for we were glad that our ascent of Fuji mountain had started well. But where was the mountain? We were, indeed, hardly yet on the real Fuji, but the way in front and behind us was darkened by the heavy fog, except for a few guides, who assured us of the fair sunlight on Fuji mountain, on whose top our footsteps would be printed on the morrow.

The mists did not disappear even when we reached Umagayashi, or "The Place to Bid Your Horse Adieu." We did not part from our horses, but rode slowly up underneath the large forest of pine trees, dewy and dark, and we left the horses at Ichijō Miya, or "The First Temple," where we were told that we must now walk. On the steep pathway we felt at once that we were holy pilgrims with the song of prayer for "Rokkon Shōjo" (the six vital parts, the eyes, nose, ears, tongue, body and heart). On the way we met with two pilgrims who were descending. One of them told us that the mountain-hut at the second station (the whole mountain is divided into ten stations, each with a stone hut, or Muro, where one can sleep) was not yet opened, as the season was a little early; and we were obliged to stop at the place called Ochujiki, or "Honorable Lunch Place," although evening had not yet fallen.

Here at Ochujiki the mists faded away under the blessing of spring who was enthroned over the valley, although the season was in July, as I said before. Every sort of flower tried its best, while the nightingales and Japanese wrens brought down heaven's golden messages. We welcomed a hundred stars after our supper was over, and went to sleep with rich dreams. We rose early next morning, and again the mists troubled our ascent. Suddenly the great sunlight burst forth upon Mount Fuji right before us.

PICTURE FELL WHEN HE DIED

Queer Coincidences in Case of Frederick Littlewood, J. P., Related at Council.

London.—Strange coincidences associated with a popular superstitious were mentioned at a recent meeting of the municipal council of Milton Regis, Kent, in relation to the death of Frederick Littlewood, J. P., aged seventy-three, an ex-chairman of the urban council, which took place some weeks ago as the result of an apoplectic seizure.

Four years ago when Mr. Littlewood had a first stroke his portrait in the council chamber was found to have fallen. At the time of his second seizure another picture in the same room fell. The day after Mr. Littlewood's death an office on entering the council room observed that another picture had fallen, the glass being smashed.

Geranium 84 inches High. Bellevue, O.—Dr. H. W. Albright of this town recently read that Miss Annie E. Merrill of Pittston, Me., claims the tallest geranium in the country with a specimen which attained a height of 84 inches. Later he came forward to dispute the claims of Miss Merrill. He exhibits one geranium 71 inches in height and another that has attained the eminence of 84 inches. Neither is of the climbing variety.

WOMAN ESCAPES
OPERATION

By Timely Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Here is her own statement.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer from both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and was fat and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Cary, Maine.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

The unwashed cup—Do you use it? Do members of your family use it at home or elsewhere? If you do it is up to you to wake up and realize that you are not only behind the times, but so far as this practice is concerned in the stone age of civilization. Don't you know that the trend of all centuries is away from the gregariousness of the primitive man and toward the privacy and individualism of modern life? In thought and action men are becoming more social, but in habits are becoming more individual. In the dark corners of the work today you will find people eating from one dish, smoking a common pipe, bathing in a common tub. Do you want to be classed with these people, or even with the crass boarding-school boy who borrows his roommate's pajamas to go to a ball game? You topped using a family tooth-brush generations ago. Why do you continue to use a family, or worse, a school or railroad station cup that is practically certain to have been used by uncleanly and diseased people and cannot be cleaned by rinsing? Be up-to-date, throw away that dirty, dripping dipper and unspeaking dish cloth and use some real hot water and soap powder or soda on the family glassware and carry your own paper or metal cup whenever you go in public.—State Board of Health.

The Presbyterian church basement was the scene of a very pretty party on Thursday evening last, when the members of the Christian Endeavor had a Halloween party with a few outside invited guests. The windows were all prettily decorated with pumpkins and all parts of the room showed some decoration. Games were played during the evening. The most enjoyable amusement was the witch. Miss Arvilla Jones, in her den with her kettle and spoon and broom, telling fortunes. A delicious luncheon was served which proved very appetizing to everyone. It was a prettily arranged party and will linger long in the memory of the guests.

The township of Frederic has completed about 2 1/2 miles of road grading leading toward this city. It extends from the new road that was completed last year to within three miles of Grayling township. It is intended to finish this grade with a crush stone top early next spring, and when completed will make a stretch of about 4 1/2 miles of crushed stone road. The construction of the road has been in the hands of C. S. Barber. There are now a number of first class gravel and stone roads in Frederic township and nearly all of them have been constructed under the supervision of Mr. Barber and the worst thing that seems to be said of his work is that he does it too good. Road building is a particular hobby of his and he makes almost a constant study of it, besides his years of practical experience makes him, perhaps, the most efficient highway commissioner in the county. His work in Frederic township stands out as a monument of evidence of his ability.

We call attention of local hunters to the notice issued by the State of Michigan, that no hunting will be allowed on the Hanson State Military reservation. These lands run within a mile of the city and their boundaries are not easily located, therefore it would not be safe to hunt in this vicinity. It is the intention of the authorities to see that all game is protected while within the boundaries of the reservation.

Beginning with the next issue of this paper we will make reasonable charges for "Cards of Thanks" and "Resolutions of Condolence." We have never made charges for these courtesies to our friends and subscribers, in the past. However while we would like to continue we have concluded that we can not afford to do so therefore we will make a charge of 25 cents for cards of thanks and 50 cents for resolutions.

Frank Woodruff, Will Laurent and Philip Van Patten walked into Justice Mahon's office Tuesday last and pleaded guilty to the charge of "Exciting to disturbance," on Halloween night. They had been arrested on complaint from Nightwatch Brenner whose string of complaints was as long as a bell rope to a freight train. Justice Mahon let them off on a suspended sentence after giving them a certain lecture. The young men may consider themselves very fortunate in being let off so easily, but no doubt the lesson will be long remembered. Two other warrants are out and will probably be served soon.

One who has been keeping tab on the conduct of boys writes as follows: Every boy and young man in town is spotted and when vacancies occur in offices and other positions of responsibility they do not go to those who hang around public places and put in their time smoking cigarettes, aping in the styles of dudes and mashers, but to the lad who has a clean record of sobriety, industry and honesty, or one who will do all in his power for his employer. A straight, clean, manly boy who never had to hunt long for a job. He is always wanted.

SYNOPSIS.

Professor Desmond of the Peak Observatory causes a great sensation throughout the country by announcing that what appears to be a satellite is approaching at terrific speed. Destruction of the earth is feared. Panic prevails everywhere. The satellite barely misses the earth. The atmospheric disturbances knock people unconscious, but do no damage. A giant bearing a cabalistic design flutters down among the guests at a large party. It is identical in design with a curious ornament worn by Doris Fulton. A curious man-like being with huge wings descends in the midst of the guests. He notices Doris' ornament and starts toward her. The man fears he intends some harm to Doris and a fierce battle ensues, in which Toliver and March, suitors of Doris, and Professor Desmond are injured. The flying man is wounded by a shot from Toliver, but escapes by flying away.

CHAPTER IV.—Continued.

"God forbid. Yet Clay shot in an effort to protect me—perhaps even did save me—and I cannot forget that. Look! Is that not he?" March gazing through the gloom saw a form sitting listlessly upon a seat in the deep shadow of a tree toward her.

"Toliver!" he called.

"Here," came the answer faintly and they hurried to his side. He was bent over, evidently suffering, and by the light of the Japanese lantern they saw that his face was drawn and pale. Quickly Doris bent over him.

"Are you badly hurt?" she inquired, a world of solicitude in her voice.

"I don't know—but I am in a terrible blow in the side."

"But why did you come to this place—why did you not go into the house, where we could care for you?"

"Because I felt faint and thought I would be better off here by myself. You had better go and look after the others. I can take care of myself. Little things have quieted down." She became very decided, very imperative in an instant.

"Indeed you shall not," she faced March. "Go at once and bring Dr. Raymond. I will remain here until you return." Then she turned her back upon him as she again addressed the sufferer.

"I am very sorry. And if you are really injured much you shall stay at our house until you are well and I, myself, will see to it that you are attended to." March faced about and started upon his errand with a frown. Of course the milk of human sympathy for the suffering was all right enough when distributed in reasonable quantities—ho, too, was sorry for Toliver—but there was such a thing as overdoing even sympathy. And Clay would stay with them and be nursed by her personally in case he thought he was seriously hurt. Then of course he would think he was seriously hurt, any man would under such circumstances, he would himself if the chance had come to him—and would have prolonged his sufferings to the last possible moment. Jealousy, he stamped away, wondering if he had been in Toliver's place if she would have been so distressed over him.

He entered the house and found Dr. Raymond, who had just finished dressing Desmond's severe cut, told him of Clay's complaint and returned with him to the bench under the tree. Doris had seated herself by the sufferer's side, unnecessarily close as March thought, and was speaking to him in a low tone. She got upon her feet and greeted them as they approached. "I am so glad you have come, Doctor. I think he needs you." The physician bent over the sufferer.

"Where does it hurt you most?"

"My left side. He hit me pretty hard—I guess with the joint of that infernal wing. Felt like I imagine a mule kick does."

"Can you get upon your feet?" Toliver arose slowly and stood slightly stooping.

"Yes, but I cannot stand erect. I seem to have a list to port." The man of medicine grunted.

"All right—I'll see you through. Take hold of his other arm, March. Alan, obeying, slipped his hand beneath the shoulder and they slowly walked the injured one within the house, and then by Doris' directions into an unoccupied guest-chamber.

"And now," said Raymond, with a bow and a smile to the girl. She comprehended, courtseyed and began to retreat.

"Yes, I will leave the room until you summon me. I will be close at hand, however. And be sure to be very careful with him unless you wish to incur my displeasure." She closed the door and was gone, leaving the three men alone.

Definitely the physician, with the help of March, bared the afflicted side and the former ran his fingers over it, pressing, tapping and questioning as to pain, his eyes closely following every expression of the pallid face below him. Three minutes of this and he announced his decision.

"Fifth rib fractured. Nothing else damaged that I can discover. I'll soon have him strapped up. Going to a hospital."

"No, I am going to remain here for tonight at least," Redmond congratulated him.

"Best thing you could do." He quickly divested the patient of his outer clothing and placed him between the sheets, bandaged him tightly about the chest and then stepped to the door. "Miss Doris," he called. Almost instantly she appeared, pale of face but resolutely calm.

"I have just been in to see poor Mrs. Emmonds—isn't it horrible! Several of the scouting party have returned with automobiles which they secured somehow, and they are now taking her and the rest of the guests to their homes. The scouts report considerable disorder upon the streets but nothing alarming. The city has not heard of the Flying Man as yet, but the telephone is in working order again and they are trying to get the police department on the wire in order to notify it. Some of our guests have received very bad news and they are frantic to get to their homes. None of their people are known to be dead, but there are disappearances, injuries and serious after effects in several cases." She approached the bed. "How is our individual patient, Doctor?"

Raymond closed his pocket case with a snap. "Nothing more than a broken rib, and I have fixed that up for the time being. All the treatment he needs is feeding, assistance when he has to move and rebandaging by a physician from time to time. Keep him as quiet as possible. He will be out in a week or ten days at the latest." Redmond smiled—if he wants to be, he added jokingly.

Doris gave a sigh of relief. "I am glad it is nothing more serious. And will he need any further attention to-night?"

"Nothing more in the way of treatment can be done. I have left him a sleeping potion which he can take presently if he seems fit. But of course he will require more or less physical assistance for a time when he has to move." She nodded comprehendingly.

"I will get a hospital nurse first thing in the morning to do the professional part of it." A little laugh burst from her lips. "But I shall insist upon remaining head nurse and waitress. And in payment the patient shall read to me from Homer, Dante and Kipling. He recites delightfully, you know." Toliver was a lawyer, was in reality a pleasing reader and speaker, and once more jealousy came crawling like a worm into Alan's soul. From the bed came the voice of the injured man.

"It is kind of you—too kind. But as you know, I have no place to go except a hospital, and if you could tolerate me for a few days until I can move about—"

"Tolerate you! I should never forgive you if you did not stay. Also, father is equally insistent. After what we have all gone through together to-night—after what you men have done to encourage and protect us women—and after the way you personally fought and got hurt for us, how dare you, lying there helpless, speak of toleration! I will not listen to such nonsense. The swiftness of her speech and the intensity of her manner caused March to pick up his hat.

"And having served my purpose I think I had better depart and leave you to your duties," he remarked dryly. He approached the bed and held out his hand. "Good night, old man, and good luck. Good night, Doctor—his eyes met the girl's for a fleeting instant—"good night, Miss Fulton." He backed bowing into the hall and started for the front door, but before he had made half a dozen steps she was at his side.

"Good night—Alan."

She had seldom called him by his first name and the sound of it from her lips thrilled and mollified him slightly, though jealousy still rankled him. "Good night, good friend. I think you acted splendidly through it all—courage. Rest assured I shall not forget it."

"Even when he is reading to you?" he returned with a trace of sarcasm. Over her face came a tiny frown, which, however, vanished as quickly as the shadow of a passing bird.

"But he was injured in my defense. Would you have me turn him out into the night when he is suffering?"

Doris Bent Over Him.

Knowing full well that he was unreasonable, March was still internally ruffled as he answered her.

"Most certainly not. But you seemed so abnormally enthusiastic over the prospect of having him with you for days and maybe weeks."

"Perhaps you would have me intimate to him that his presence is a burden!"

"Not at all. But there is reason in all things."

"Except a man."

He let his hand fall upon the knob and stood confronting her, his face troubled, his voice low and earnest.

"Doris, you know that I love you, and when a man loves a woman as I do

of all—withdraw themselves clamlike into their shells of reserve and refused to be cajoled forth by the most tempting of flatteries or the most exasperating of proddings. But great day as it was for the press and the wire, it was still greater for certain of the Adventists. To them the failure of the world to be destroyed was but a temporary discouragement, fully offset by the certainty that the first small body had been but a herald to warn the earth of the larger and close following one which was to destroy it. Great day, also, it was for the dead and injured, for their names were blazoned in great type the world around; in fact it was a great day for almost everybody.

And then close following the first announcement of the passing of the world, in the night came a second, scarcely less startling or spectacular. The earth had at large upon it a new and marvelous being, in fact a former inhabitant of the other sphere who had been blown off, fallen off, jumped off or in some other manner dislodged from his native habitat, and who was now stalking abroad in the land of the free seeking whom he might devour. He was seven feet tall, reddish brown in color, monkeyish of limbs and bad pinions that spread over thirty feet. He had been seen by at least a dozen reputable (?) citizens, some of whom had fought a duel with him in which he had escaped after being severely wounded. This caused a great roar of laughter, especially in foreign countries, and the newspapers of the world treated the story according to their national characteristics. The British press treated it with cold sarcasm and deep regret at the yellow journalism of the American newspapers, the French with shrieks of derision, the Latins with insolent abuse and the Germans with utter contempt. The Yankers were out-Yanking themselves; they were making themselves ridiculous, they were contemptible braggarts, or they were great dinnerheads, according to the nationality of the sheet that printed the item. Instantly the cartoonists came into their own and for a day the world was theirs. The Flying Man was depicted in every conceivable shape that their vivid imaginations could conceive. He looked like an eagle, a crow, a rooster, a crane, a bat, a demon, an angel. Learned judges cracked ponderous jokes at his expense, the ministry used him to point a moral and adorn a tale, mothers employed him as a bugaboo to frighten their children and the Congressional clown pretended to try and get a law passed whereby the Government should provide him free transportation back to his own land. Far and wide dime showmen exhibited huge pictures of him and announced his presence in chains within their tents, and that chains did really rattle within, those without could readily hear. Even in the city where he had appeared his existence was generally discredited, notwithstanding the previously good reputations for veracity of those who vouched for him, the more charitably minded attributing him to the overwrought imagination of one of the party on the lawn, due to the excitement of the event, and suggesting that to believe they saw the same things being by no means impossible among half-faithful people. Only the Adventists accepted him seriously, they being convinced that he was a personal representative of the Deity. As to those who had really seen him and had announced the fact, they at first grew indignant beneath the storm of doubt and ridicule which assailed them, then realizing the futility of further assertion closed their mouths in silent contempt.

It was on the second day after the eventful night that Desmond, now famous throughout the world for his discovery and announcement, yet chafing that his sanity should be questioned on the subject of the Flying Man who had given him such an ugly wound, conceived an idea which he immediately proceeded to put into secret execution. In company with two celebrated analytical chemists, he proceeded to the Fulton home and with his knife cut several blood-stained slavings from the steps where the Flying Man had stood for an instant swoop. But I had a good start and beat him to the house by quite a bit and rushed in and locked the doors and shoved my wife in a closet and then took down the gun—an old musket that I always kept loaded with birdshot. This was just about noon time and my daughter was at school half a mile away. Well, everything was still for a while, a kind of a creepy still with nothing but a few locusts singing, still, still—still as a graveyard at high noon in midsummer—seemed as if I had never known it to be so still, then I heard something light on the roof and go pat, pat, pat, like, as if somebody was trotting around on it barefoot, and then I knew he was up there and looking around. Then that sound stopped and for a while everything was quiet as death again outside and I was standing against the wall where I could see both windows in front of me and with my ears—well I guess I never listened so hard before. I could even hear the flies buzzing on the pane clear across the room and hear my wife breathing behind the closet door. Pretty soon I heard him try the kitchen door very soft, but I had locked it and the next I heard of him he was fooling around in the woodshed. That made me get cold, for I thought he was after the ax to smash in the door, but after a while he seemed to go out of there and for a long time there wasn't a sound—I don't know how long, it seemed like an hour, but I guess it was maybe five minutes. Anyway I got so nervous that I couldn't stand still any longer, so I pulled off my boots and tiptoed out into the kitchen. I peeked out of the windows, but couldn't see anything, and after looking and listening for a while I crept back soft as a cat into the parlor, and my God, man! There he was with that awful face pushed right against the window pane and those great June bug eyes of his looking straight in at me. I don't reckon I was ever so scared before in my life—I know I wasn't. I just lost control of myself, let out a yell and blazed away at him. He ducked like a flash and I don't reckon I hit him, for I was too scared to take aim. Next thing I remember I was cowering my gun and couldn't remember whether I had loaded it or not, so I tried it with the ramrod—it is an old-fashioned muzzle loader, you know—and found that I had. Must have put in the shot first, though, for when I tried to shoot it later only the cap snapped.

"Well, I kind of pulled myself together and went sneaking around again sweating and trying to keep up my spunk by telling myself it I ever got another shot at him he'd never go around bothering people again in this world. Next I saw of him he was about a hundred yards away over by the stone pile and was lifting up a rock that must have weighed seventy-five pounds. While I was wondering what he was up to he got it in his arms and made a hop or two and then great black wings shot out, and up he went flap, flap, circling around and getting straighter overhead every minute till he was so straight up I couldn't see him any more from the window. Must have been a couple of hundred feet up when I lost sight of him. Then of a sudden I got cold all over again, for I knew what he was up to now—knew it as well as if he had told me. And I wasn't mistaken neither, for about a minute later came a smash-bang, and the rock came through the kitchen roof like a thousand of brick and knocked the stove all to smithereens."

She was at his side.

CHAPTER V.

The Declaration of War.

It may well be doubted if ever before in its countless hundreds of generations this gray old world became so agog as it did on the morning of the twenty-first of August, the day succeeding the passing of the scudding visitor from the depths of space. From Maine to the Philippines, from the Yukon to Chile, from England to Japan, from Norway to South Africa, from mid-ocean liner to mid-ocean liner, from creeping jungle streams to roaring glacial torrents, from desert city to forest town in a score of different languages news thrills wildly shrieked or softly tipped their "extras." In many cases the first and latest edition extraordinary the populace ever heard of during their lives. The earth had been brushed by another celestial body which had passed it so closely that its roar had deafened and its breath overwhelmed even to the death scores of human beings way up on the back bone of the North American continent. Buildings had been crushed like trampled eggs, trees torn up by their roots as dentists pull teeth from their sockets, while dust whisked from the visitor as by a mammoth broom had fallen and carpeted a large section of the earth with a coverlet as thick and soft as a feather bed. The earth had shuddered like a horse lashed with a whip, tidal waves had run riot and total annihilation had only been prevented by mere chance, good luck, miscalculation, Divine mercy, or as one Italian paper naively put it, "by the foresight and prompt action of Signor Desmond, the discoverer." Not a telegraph, telephone, cable or wireless upon the world but buzzed and crackled with the tremendous news, and every observatory in the world where the atmosphere was clear or the view unobstructed had its great telescope trained like a hostile cannon upon the supposed path of the departed body. Not a trace of it did they find, and more astonishing still, the microscoposcope did not register it. Where it had gone was as great a mystery as from whence it had come, and all the wise savants of the long tubes could do was wag their heads and form their own opinions. Some came boldly forth with explanations closely coinciding with Professor Desmond's, others held diametrically opposite opinions, while still others—and perhaps these gentlemen were the wisest of all—withdraw themselves clamlike into their shells of reserve and refused to be cajoled forth by the most tempting of flatteries or the most exasperating of proddings. But great day as it was for the press and the wire, it was still greater for certain of the Adventists. There was no chance of its being a flying machine, for I've seen them and they don't flap their wings. I ran then—ran as fast as I could, looking up at him over my shoulder. He saw me too, for he commenced to come down in great circles

however, the Russians were able to get reinforcements to the end. At Delhi the British loss was 2,300 killed and wounded. The siege of San Sabastian cost 2,400 men, and the famous siege of Rochelle, carried out over four centuries ago, cost no fewer than 20,000 men. In this case eight assaults were delivered.

The United States lost heavily in the sieges of the Civil war. To give one instance, the federal army had 10,000 killed and wounded in the two assaults delivered on Petersburg.

Americans in London Theaters. It is interesting to notice that the increase in the number of visitors from the United States is said to be among the reasons that have induced the management of the Savoy theater to declare evening dress to be optional in the stalls. The convenience of the business man who is thus absolved from the necessity of taking a suitcase to his office, or hurrying home or to his club to dress, is also consulted. But the fact remains that managers like to see a well-dressed "house," which also adds to the amenities of the production.—London Globe.

What Famous Sieges Cost

Reduction of Fortified Places, Stubbornly Defended, Means a Fearful Loss of Human Life.

No details are yet available of the losses incurred in the reduction of Adrianople by the Balkan nations, but they are bound to be enormous. The capture of Port Arthur cost Japan 24,000 wounded and 58,000 dead. In the Franco-German war the loss of the besiegers was very small in all cases, but that was because the French garrison surrendered quickly, or where the French held out the Germans did not attempt an assault. Strasbourg was taken with a loss of 866 men. Belfort cost the Germans 2,100 men. At Paris, Metz, and the other places the loss was insignificant.

In 1877 the Russians besieged two fortified places held by the Turkish troops. Kara was carried by a surprise night attack, at which the Russians lost 2,300 men. Plevna showed a very different result. Here the Russians carried out three assaults, all of which failed, and their total loss in killed and wounded amounted to the immense number of 27,700 officers and men, or nearly one-third of the besieging army.

The great siege of Sebastopol in 1855 was a desperate affair. It lasted 11 months, and in that period the Russians had 84,000 men killed and wounded, while the French and British besieging forces lost 60,000. In this case, like an eagle does when he is soaring off a cliff into a canyon, and he was getting in on me closer at every swoop. But I had a good start and beat him to the house by quite a bit and rushed in and locked the doors and shoved my wife in a closet and then took down the gun—an old musket that I always kept loaded with birdshot. I was coming across a field and happened to glance up at the sun to see what time it was and I saw him—yes, I saw him—the Flying Man, for of course I had heard of him—I guess everybody in the world has. He was up, 'way up, 'way up a thousand feet, and didn't look very big and at first I thought he was some funny kind of a hawk, then I got a better view and saw it was a man. There was no chance of its being a flying machine, for I've seen them and they don't flap their wings. I ran then—ran as fast as I could, looking up at him over my shoulder. He saw me too, for he commenced to come down in great circles

however, the Russians were able to get reinforcements to the end. At Delhi the British loss was 2,300 killed and wounded. The siege of San Sabastian cost 2,400 men, and the famous siege of Rochelle, carried out over four centuries ago, cost no fewer than 20,000 men. In this case eight assaults were delivered.

The United States lost heavily in the sieges of the Civil war. To give one instance, the federal army had 10,000 killed and wounded in the two assaults delivered on Petersburg.

Americans in London Theaters. It is interesting to notice that the increase in the number of visitors from the United States is said to be among the reasons that have induced the management of the Savoy theater to declare evening dress to be optional in the stalls. The convenience of the business man who is thus absolved from the necessity of taking a suitcase to his office, or hurrying home or to his club to dress, is also consulted. But the fact remains that managers like to see a well-dressed "house," which also adds to the amenities of the production.—London Globe.

What Famous Sieges Cost

Reduction of Fortified Places, Stubbornly Defended, Means a Fearful Loss of Human Life.

No details are yet available of the losses incurred in the reduction of Adrianople by the Balkan nations, but they are bound to be enormous. The capture of Port Arthur cost Japan 24,000 wounded and 58,000 dead. In the Franco-German war the loss of the besiegers was very small in all cases, but that was because the French garrison surrendered quickly, or where the French held out the Germans did not attempt an assault. Strasbourg was taken with a loss of 866 men. Belfort cost the Germans 2,100 men. At Paris, Metz, and the other places the loss was insignificant.

In 1877 the Russians besieged two fortified places held by the Turkish troops. Kara was carried by a surprise night attack, at which the Russians lost 2,300 men. Plevna showed a very different result. Here the Russians carried out three assaults, all of which failed, and their total loss in killed and wounded amounted to the immense number of 27,700 officers and men, or nearly one-third of the besieging army.

The great siege of Sebastopol in 1855 was a desperate affair. It lasted 11 months, and in that period the Russians had 84,000 men killed and wounded, while the French and British besieging forces lost 60,000. In this case, however, the Russians were able to get reinforcements to the end. At Delhi the British loss was 2,300 killed and wounded. The siege of San Sabastian cost 2,400 men, and the famous siege of Rochelle, carried out over four centuries ago, cost no fewer than 20,000 men. In this case eight assaults were delivered.

Two Years Has a Great Idea. It had been a hard afternoon for Joseph. His mother had taken him downtown shopping with her, and as they were crossing Gladstone boulevard on the way home his little feet began to lag. Joseph is two years old.

"Carry me, mamma," he said.

"But I can't, Joseph," she said. "Don't you see mamma has her bundles and her pocketbook to carry? It's only a little piece now."

Joseph trudged a bit farther and then he had an idea.

"You put your pocketbook and bundles down and let them walk," he said. "Then you can carry me!" So she found room for him.—Kansas City Star.

Hard to Reach Her. A good planter's wife, "befo' de wah," was teaching a jet black house girl, just fourteen and fresh from the plantation, the alphabet. Betsy had learned the first two letters, but always forgot the useless letter "C."

"Don't you see with your eyes, Betsy? Can't you remember the word see?" said the mistress.

"Yassum," answered Betsy, but she couldn't. Five minutes later Betsy began again bravely. "A—B—C" and there she stopped.

"What do you do with your eyes, Betsy?"

"I sleeps wid 'em, mistiss." And this ended for that day the effort to "educate" Betsy.

HOUSEKEEPERS Must be Watchful

For great efforts are being made in this vicinity to sell baking powders of inferior class, made from alum acids and lime phosphates, both undesirable to those who require high-grade cream of tartar baking powder to make clean and healthful food.

The official Government tests have shown Royal Baking Powder to be a pure, healthful, grape cream of tartar baking powder, of highest strength, and care should be taken to prevent the substitution of any other brand in its place.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price per pound, and is cheaper and better at its price than any other baking powder in the world.

A Proclamation by the Governor.

The Seventh International Purty congress will convene in Minneapolis, Minnesota, November 7 to 12, 1913. Sunday 9th, has been designated "Purty Sunday," the purpose being to create and crystallize intelligent sentiment against the greatest evils of our time, and to direct this stirred conscience into safe and sane action for annihilation of commercialized vice and the promotion of social and personal morality.

Every state in the Union is expending vast sums of money for the purpose of caring for its imbeciles, epileptics, lunatics, paupers and criminals. This is a commendable characteristic of modern civilization. In recent years the pertinent question has been asked, "Why not give careful attention to the source of these unfortunate?" Every child has the divine right to be decently born. Social and individual purity together with physical and mental vigor constitutes a secure means of making this divine right possible.

The people of our great state must be awakened. They must come to an appreciation of the full meaning and importance of a single standard of virtue if they are to ever banish white slavery and kindred crimes from society.

On Purty Sunday let all clergymen of all churches appeal to the people in behalf of that purity which Christ taught. Emphasize the positive side of personal righteousness. Much that is printed in books and proclaimed from the platform, in relation to sex problems, is true yet positively pernicious. Known as it is, does not always make for virtue—it may be for vicious conduct. Therefore, awaken and arouse a love for purity. It is the sunlight of righteousness that the youth of our land must have, if they are to grow into the fullness of noble manhood and womanhood.

WOODBRIDGE N. FERRIS,
Governor.

A Little Wisdom.

A man with a half volition goes backward and forward and makes no way on the smoothest road; a man with a whole volition advances on the roughest and will reach his purpose, if there be even a little wisdom in it. —Caryl.

Mo Know.

Teacher—"Tommy, you are too great an idler. Do you know what becomes of people who won't work?" Tommy—"Yessum. They gets supported by the rest of the family." Judge.

Just Think of It.

A little boy once said to his school mates, "I don't make any more mistakes in my music." This little boy had such poor eyesight that he could not read letters three and a half inches square more than six feet away from him, and yet he had been repeatedly punished by his violin teacher for making mistakes while taking his lessons. Just think of it; punished for making mistakes because he could not see his notes plainly!

How did he find out his eyes were weak? His school teacher had been taking test of the sight of her pupils and discovered that this boy could not see well. She reported the fact to his parents, who got glasses that made him the happiest boy in the school, saved him many undeserved punishments and caused him to say, "I don't make any more mistakes in my music."

This boy did not know, nor did his parents know, but he saw as well as every other boy, and his mistakes were thought to be from carelessness and inattention.

This same boy afterwards became a noted violinist; was educated abroad and played before royalty. His glasses enabled him to see his notes plainly and he made no more mistakes in his reading music.

There have been thousands of just such boys and girls in our public schools in the past, who have been stumbling along, hating their lessons, scolded and punished by their teacher and parents, just because they had a defect of vision of which they and their parents and teacher were ignorant.

Parents do you know that your children have good eyesight? Do you know that they are not "long-sighted," "near-sighted," or "color blind"? Do they often complain of being tired, or having a head ache when they return home from school? Do they dislike school? Are they sleepy and dull when trying to learn their home tasks? Is it hard for them to keep up with their class? Are they inclined to "play hooky"? Then do not punish or scold them, until you first find out if there is not some physical cause behind it all, so that you may not regret later and blame yourself for neglect or injustice to one of your own.

Ignorance of the law is no excuse to the law breaker in court. Ignorance is no excuse for neglect to your children. Fifty per cent. of the blindness caused by separation of the retina (the sight seeing membrane within the eye) occurs in people who are near-sighted. Many of the head aches of children and others are the result of eyestrain caused by the attempt of the delicate eye muscles to overcome the defect. This over taxing of them strains the eye muscles, then the letters blur and run together, the child feels tired, and the eyes pain or headache follows.

Do not neglect your children's eyes!

Cooking in a jar.

Not until she has tried it will a housekeeper realize how delicious are vegetables and fruits cooked in a jar in the oven rather than on top of the stove. As little water as possible should be added, then the full flavor of the foodstuff is retained. A casserole answers admirably for vegetables or fruits prepared in this way. Apple sauce, rhubarb, prunes and beans are some of the things which are really excellent cooked in the oven. The process is simple for the housewife, for there is not the danger of burning as on top of the stove.

German Dumplings.

Grate three or four cold boiled potatoes. To these add two thoroughly beaten eggs, a little salt and one-half cup milk. Stir in enough flour so you can form into balls with your hands. Be careful not to get too stiff and flour your hands. Drop into boiling salted water and boil about 20 minutes. When they have boiled about ten minutes turn over quickly without sticking fork into them and cover again. Pour gravy over them same as for potatoes.

Gravy made after trying pork chops is best.

Colonial Cushions.

For the bureau of old mahogany or the mahogany shaving case a pin cushion not too frilly is needed. Such a one is shown in a "colonial cushion," a copy of an antique. Even these modern copies come from old Salem. It is square in shape and of mahogany, standing on four half-inch high feet. Within the mahogany frame is the cushion made in any color. Of course, the cushion part may be renewed as often as one wishes, so it makes quite a durable article.

A LOVELY FACE BUT UGLY HAIR

How often you see an otherwise lovely face spoiled by homely hair—face that would be charmingly beautiful if she only had prettier hair. What a pity!—and how foolish! Because that ugly hair, stringy, dull, lifeless-looking though it may be, can be made as glossy, soft, silky and beautiful as the heart could desire if only taken proper care of. Harmony Hair Beautifier is just what it is named—a hair beautifier. It is not a hair dye or hair oil—it is just a dainty, rose-perfumed liquid dressing to give the hair its natural gloss and brightness, its natural softness, its natural beauty. Very easy to apply—simply sprinkle a little on your hair each time before brushing it. It contains no oil, and will not change the color of the hair, nor darken gray hair.

SPIRITISM SAID TO BE DEMONISM.

A most interesting little brochure has recently come off the press setting forth with little proofs that the communications received by and through Spiritist Mediums is of Demon origin. The writer traces his subject through the Scriptures from the time when certain of the holy angels became disobedient. He proves from the Scriptures that these fallen spirits pervert the human dead, with whose past history, spirits, though invisible, are thoroughly acquainted. He shows that they also frequently personate the Creator and the Redeemer, commanding their deceived ones to pray, do penance, etc. This, however, is merely to lead them on and to bring them more thoroughly under demonic control. Sometimes by breaking down the natural barrier, the human will, they possess their victim, and rule him more or less to his ruin—frequently sending such to the mad-house. Numerous illustrations, Scriptural and otherwise, are given. The price of the little book is but five cents; it should be in the hands of all interested in Spiritism or who have friends interested therein. Enclose stamps to the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Elisha Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.
